CHAPTER 10 EXERCISES

Exercise 10-2

Write a function called cumsum that takes a list of numbers and returns the cumulative sum; that is, a new list where the *i*th element is the sum of the first i + 1 elements from the original list.

For example:

`t = [1, 2, 3]`

`cumsum(t) -> [1, 3, 6]`

```
In [81]: def cumsum(t):
...
    Takes a list of numbers and returns the cumulative sum in a new list where the ith element is the sum of the first i+1 elements from the original list

    Parameters
    -----
    t : list
        List of numbers that the user wants to have cumulatively summed

    Returns
    -----
    new_t : list
        New, cumulatively summed list

    new_t = [t[0]]

    for i in range(1, len(t)):
        new_t.append(t[i] + new_t[i-1])

    return new_t (cumsum([1,2,3]))
```

Out[81]: [1, 3, 6]

In [ ]: (cumsum([1,2,3,4,5,6]))

Exercise 10-5

Write a function called is_sorted that takes a list as a parameter and returns True if the list is sorted in ascending order and False otherwise.

For example:

`is_sorted([1, 2, 2]) ---> True`

`is_sorted(['b', 'a'])---> False`

```
In [82]: def is_sorted(t):
...
    Analyzes the list and checks to see if its values are in ascending order or not

    Parameters
    -----
    t : list
        List that user wants to analyze

    Returns
    -----
    bool
        True if list is in ascending order, False if not.

    ...

    for i in range(len(t)-1):
        if t[i] > t[i+1]: return False return True

list1 = [1,2,3,4,5]
print(is_sorted(list1))

list2 = [1,2,5,4,3]
print(is_sorted(list2))

list3 = ['a', 'b', 'c', 'd']
print(is_sorted(list3))

list4 = ['a', 'c', 'b', 'd']
print(is_sorted(list4))
```

```
True False
True False
```

CHAPTER 11 EXERCISES

Exercise 11-1

Write a function that reads the words in `words.txt` and stores them as keys in a dictionary. It doesn't matter what the values are. Then you can use the `in` operator as a fast way to check whether a string is in the dictionary. If you did Exercise 10.10, you can compare the speed of this implementation with the `list` `in` operator and the `bisect` search.

```
In [78]: def word_key_reader(f):
...
    Reads in the contents of a file (list of words) and creates a dictionary with the word as the key and the word position as the value

Parameters

f : str
Location of the txt file

Returns

d : dict
Dictionary containing all of the words and their position

...

```
d = dict()
counter = 0
for line in f:
    word = line.strip()
    if word not in d:
        d[word] = counter counter += 1
return d
```

```
def word_check(d, word):
    ...
```

Checks to see if the word exists in the dictionary. Prints out the word and its position if so, or a message saying that the word is not present if not

Parameters

d : dict
Dictionary containing all of the words and their position word : str
Word that the user wants to check if in the dictionary

Returns

None.

...

```
if word in d:
    print('Key: {} \t Value: {}'.format(word, d[word])) else:
    print('{} does not appear in the dictionary of words.'.format(word))
```

with open("C:/Users/Adrian Bakhtar/Documents/Smart Products/words.txt") as fin: dictionary = word_key_reader(fin)
```

word_check(dictionary, 'apple') word_check(dictionary, 'Hogwarts')
```

```
fin.close()
```

Key: apple Value: 4450

Hogwarts does not appear in the dictionary of words.

CHAPTER 12

Exercise 12-1

Write a function called `most_frequent` that takes a string and prints the letters in decreasing order of frequency. Find text samples from several different languages and see how letter frequency varies between languages.

Tried to translate the entire words.txt file, but there are a lot of words in there and it was taking a LONG time. I only read the first 70 words (all being words beginning with 'a'), so the letter frequency may be a tad skewed.

Also, the very first word in the words.txt file is aa which translated to Automóvil club británico for the Spanish file. This is actually AA in Spanish, so that was funny. I am sure there were other accidental translations in the French and German words txt files.

```
In [19]: from deep_translator import GoogleTranslator

Exercise 13-2

Go to Project Gutenberg (<http://gutenberg.org>) and download your favorite out-of-copyright book in plain text format. Modify your program from the previous exercise to read the book you downloaded, skip over the header information at the beginning of the file, and process the rest of the words as before. Then modify the program to count the total number of words in the book, and the number of times each word is used. Print the number of different words used in the book. Compare different books by different authors, written in different eras. Which author uses the most extensive vocabulary?

```
In [86]: import string

Parameters

    File path to the story that wants to be analyzed that is in a txt file

Returns
-----
word_counts : dict Dictionary containing each new word as the key and the number of occurrences as total_words : int

num_diff_words : int
    The total number of different words in the story.

It would seem that The Great Gatsby has the most extensive vocabulary, since it had the highest percentage of different words used!

Additionally, I tried to create a table similar to the last problem comparing all of the similar unique words across all three text files, but I think there were too many to handle. I then added more return values, so this code will not run now.
